Highlights of the Railway Routes in Vietnam

Night Train Hanoi to Sapa

Starting from the vibrant capital of Hanoi, the train ascends to the cool, serene highlands of Sa Pa. We can use night train SP3 & SP4, the Vietnamese Railways air- conditioned 4-berth soft sleepers, may also offer a handful of 2-berth VIP soft sleeper compartments with two lower berths.

From October 2023, two high-quality trains into operation on the Hanoi – Da Nang will officially put route, the SE19 and SE20 trains. The sleeper cabins have been redesigned with an elegant and cosy style, with air-conditioning systems, food service cabin. The sector hopes that passengers will experience a sense of comfort as if they were in the warmth of their own homes while travelling on the high-quality SE19 and SE20 trains.

Day train (3 hours) Danang to Hue

A train route named “Central Heritage Connection” linking Hue city and Da Nang city was put into operation on March 2024. During the about three hours of this train journey, tourists can admire the magnificent natural beauty along Hai Van Pass, with one side being Truong Son Mountain Range and the other the sea before reaching Da Nang, which boasts one of the six most beautiful beaches on the planet. On the way back, from Da Nang to Hue, they can set foot in the former capital of Hue, home to various heritage sites.

The Vietage has been developed by Anantara to introduce memorable luxury travel journeys through Vietnam. The first "The Vietage by Anantara" luxury train carriage launched in 2020—a six-hour journey connecting Da Nang and Quy Nhon. In 2024 Anantara offers a new five-hour luxury train experience in southern Viet Nam that connects the popular resort destinations of Nha Trang and Quy Nhon. This is slow travel at its best—the trains hit an average speed of 51.9 kilometers per hour (32.2 mph). The Vietage train offers luxurious seating for only 12 passengers on each journey, including gourmet dining and free-flow beverages, head and shoulder treatments.
